Editorial Review

From School Library Journal

Gr 4–7—Randi Rhodes, black-belt ninja and kid detective, is back again with her sidekicks, D.C. and Pudge, to solve another rousing mystery. This installment takes the trio from Deer Creek, TN to Brooklyn, NY, where a world-famous Fabergé egg exhibit is opening at the Brooklyn Museum, right across from Randi's aunt's apartment. After noticing suspicious behavior from the new neighbors and learning that pieces of the collection have mysteriously disappeared, the gang of detective ninjas is on the case. With a tae kwon do competition, Thanksgiving dinner, and a few familial hiccups standing in the way, this quick read is packed with action around every corner. Although the fast-paced plot deals with a mystery through and through, the diverse characters are well-rounded and experience their own tough personal situations with determination and grace. While the story is didactic at times, the importance of family, confidence, and free-spiritedness shine through the overall plot. Although a few clues fit almost too perfectly into place and the lax nature of adult accomplices involved in attaining them is sometimes questionable, this book will satiate any young detective's thirst for mystery.—Brittany Staszak, Glencoe Public Library, IL
